Survey of Puget Sound Employers

The Survey of Puget Sound Employers is a research effort dedicated to providing information to local and national leaders about the challenges facing employers in your region. Survey staff will call approximately 7,500 randomly-selected employers in the Puget Sound region. This includes King, Snohomish, and Pierce County.

This survey is part of a multi-city study being conducted by the University of Washington.

University of Washington Survey Research Division

The Employer Survey is being housed at the UW Survey Research Division, a subset of the Social Development Research Group in the School of Social Work. The Survey Research Division uses an Integrated Data Collection System that supports telephone, web, mail, and field interviews for social science researchers. It offers researchers a variety of survey modes that can be used alone or in combination to collect high quality survey data.

Project Components

This study involves several different project components, including employer surveys in multiple cities, an in-depth study of workers with children, a study of regional pricing, and analysis of administrative and census data. The project is a joint effort between faculty at the University of Washington’s’ Evans School of Public Affairs, School of Social Work, and School of Public Health.

This project is funded by a contract with the City of Seattle and by grants from multiple foundations, including the Laura and John Arnold Foundation and the Russell Sage Foundation.
