This review is the product of a graduate student fellowship with the Nancy Bell Evans Center on Nonprofits & Philanthropy at the University of Washington’s Daniel J. Evans School of Public Affairs. The paper was completed by Jennifer Genung Rigg under the advisement of Professor Steven Rathgeb Smith, Director of the Nancy Bell Evans Center. For questions or comments, please contact Jennifer at jogr@u.washington.edu.

There are numerous individuals and organizations to thank in making this research possible, starting of course with the dedicated staff, board members, volunteers, and members committed to developing statewide nonprofit associations. I’d like to extend special thanks to Steven Rathgeb Smith, Margaret T. Gordon, Cory Sbarbaro, Putnam Barber, Robbie Rohr, Carolyn Cunningham, Mike Bisesi, Lora Pollari-Welbes, Jeanne Kojis, Liz Heath, Sandy Gill, Caroline Tillier, and Jessica Trupin for advice, editing, and feedback. All of these people made invaluable contributions to this research, but the mistakes in this review are solely my own.

The nature of nonprofit research is that information is dynamic and constantly changing. I hope that perusing this review entices you to learn more about statewide associations of nonprofits and provides you with a guide for where to go for more information, directly from the associations themselves. Thank you for your interest in statewide nonprofit associations.
The aim of the Nancy Bell Evans Center on Nonprofits & Philanthropy is to enhance the understanding and vitality of the nonprofit sector through research, education, and community engagement.

Research
The Center conducts and supports research of national and international importance to scholars, policy-makers, and practitioners. Efforts are focused primarily on research that examines the changing service and policy roles of nonprofit organizations and philanthropic entities in the context of the continuing transformation of government.

Education
The Center supports nonprofit education both at the Evans School and across the University of Washington campus. In conjunction with the Evan School’s Cascade Center, the Center also provides advanced growth and learning opportunities for senior-level nonprofit professionals in the Pacific Northwest.

Community Engagement
In an effort to stimulate thinking on current issues, promote increased collaboration, and share best practices, the Center regularly convenes and connects leaders, board members, scholars, graduate students, and others working in the nonprofit sector. The Center also collaborates with other nonprofit support organizations to further their development in parallel with its own.

WHAT STATEWIDE ASSOCIATIONS DO
Statewide associations of nonprofits (SANs) support local nonprofits by strengthening their capacity and speaking on behalf of their concerns, while also keeping the public informed on the latest challenges and achievements in the nonprofit field. Through SANs, nonprofits collaborate to manage and lead themselves more effectively, build accountability through codes of conduct and nonprofit standards, access information clearinghouses, increase their impact in their communities, and strengthen their collaborative voice on issues that affect both society and the nonprofit sector. Statewide associations of nonprofits tend to offer services in these core areas:

- Advocacy and Public Policy
- Communication
- Leadership and Convening
- Products and Services
- Research and Information/Referral
- Technical Assistance and Professional Development

There are over 40 nonprofit associations throughout the United States. Information about many of the associations is included in this report. This report also includes emerging associations, as well as those that provide services to nonprofit organizations across multiple states. When available, these nonprofit state association snapshots include: contact information; mission statement; year founded; services/activities; number of members (which refers to the number of 501(c)(3) members), staff and board members; funding sources; and the association’s marketing tag line. This information about nonprofit state associations was compiled from their websites, annual reports, marketing materials, training guides, member lists, and IRS Form 990s.

BY THE NUMBERS¹
- The majority of SANs provide the following services: cost-saving insurance programs (directors and officers, unemployment, health), consulting, online job banks, in-house libraries, and consulting databases. Forty-nine percent provide online libraries/resources.
- The average SAN has been in operation for 13.5 years.
- SAN operating budgets totaled over $25 million in 2003, with a median budget of $475,000.
- The median number of members of a state association is 530.
- SANs held over 1,500 events in 2003. The median number of events at a SAN was 35.
- Over 9,000 individuals attended one of the 29 SAN annual conferences or meetings.
- Eighteen SANs send a regular electronic newsletter.
- The median staff time at a SAN committed to public policy and advocacy is 0.3 FTE.
- Thirty-four percent use the GiveVoice online grassroots advocacy and messaging system.
- For nonprofit organizations belonging to SANs, the median staff size of is 7.5 FTE and the median budget is $350,000.
- Seventy-five percent of SANs have member voting rights.

TYPES OF NONPROFIT ASSOCIATIONS

There are many models for nonprofit associations. Some of the types of SANs that emerged in this review are listed below, with highlighted examples:

1. Central provider of all core SAN services
   - Georgia Center for Nonprofits

2. More than one SAN to provide services in different regions of a state
   - New York: Nonprofit Coordinating Committee of New York (NPCC) has 1,300 members in the NY metro area; the Council of Community Services of New York State (CCSNYS) is based in Albany, NY, with four regional offices around NY state.

3. Multiple statewide associations focusing on different topics or sub-sectors
   - Michigan Nonprofit Association and Michigan League for Human Services

4. One SAN providing most services, with training (or other core service) provided through different source
   - Texas Association of Nonprofit Organizations collaborates with the Center for Community-Based & Nonprofit Organizations at Austin Community College.

5. Compilation of sub-sector alliances
   - Iowa Nonprofit Resource Center convenes arts, housing, and environmental alliance leaders to analyze statewide gaps for nonprofits.

6. Multi-state collaboration
   - Colorado Association of Nonprofit Organizations and New Mexico Nonprofit Association jointly hold an annual conference.

The subsequent review of SANs, listed by state, can be used to assess the level of statewide support for the nonprofit sector, compare SAN services and structures, and learn more about the array of activities conducted by SANs throughout the United States.
